

Questions to Ask the Doctor about Non-metastatic Castration-Resistant Prostate Cancer (nmCRPC)

Prostate cancer is when cancer forms in the prostate gland. It is the second-leading cause of cancer death for men in the U.S. When caught early, patients live longer. At first, prostate cancer may stop growing with hormone treatment that blocks testosterone. This is called androgen deprivation treatment (ADT). After time, cancer cells can “outsmart” ADT. The cancer learns to grow, even without the male hormone. Castration-resistant prostate cancer (CRPC) means that your cancer shows signs of growth, or your PSA has risen while using ADT.

If prostate cancer starts to grow again, but it is not found outside the prostate by any imaging such as CT scans or bone scans, it is called “non-metastatic” (nm) or nmCRPC.

It helps to talk with your doctor about next steps for nmCRPC care. Below are some questions that you may want to ask your doctor.

QUESTIONS TO ASK ABOUT PROSTATE CANCER:

- What kind of prostate cancer do I have – how fast is it growing?
- What do the changes in my PSA level mean over time?
- Do I need any other tests to help me decide what care is best for me?
- What other physical issues should I tell you about? What are skeletal related events (SREs)?
- Are you sure my cancer hasn’t spread outside of my prostate?
- What tests should we do to make sure the cancer has not spread?

QUESTIONS TO ASK ABOUT CARE:

- What are my next steps for care?
- Should I keep taking the same hormone treatment?
- Will you tell me about treatments for non-metastatic CRPC, like apalutamide or enzalutamide? Would either be good for me and why?
- Is watchful waiting the best choice for me (why/why not)?
- Are there clinical trials that I should keep in mind?
- What are the pros and cons of each choice?
- Does my health insurance plan cover the costs for the care choices you suggest?
- What can I do to protect my bones?
- Will vitamin D or other things help?
- What else can help slow down my cancer growth?
- Which choice is most likely to keep my cancer from growing?
- Can you give me the name of some other doctors for a second opinion? Can you put me in touch with a patient or support group?

OTHER EXPERTS AND SECOND OPINIONS

It is common to seek a second opinion, and it helps. You can ask your doctor to suggest a specialist. Doctors are used to this question. If you don’t feel good about asking your cancer doctor, ask your primary care doctor or a prostate cancer support group for referrals. If you can, find a doctor who is part of a National Cancer Institute (NCI)-listed Cancer Center.

- A urological oncologist is the doctor who can treat advanced prostate cancer and urinary symptoms. Ask if he/she has a lot of experience treating prostate cancer, CRPC and nmCRPC. Ask if they are up-to-date on the latest treatments for nmCRPC and CRPC.
- A radiation oncologist can tell you about radiation treatment choices for your diagnosis.
- A medical oncologist can offer other therapies if cancer spreads to other parts of your body, or if cancer returns.
